FELLOWS' HYPOPHOSPHITES.

TUBERCULAR DISEASE OF LUNGS AND BRONCHITIS.

Tubercular consumption of the lungs is that form of the disease most common, most fatal and until recently considered incurable. Tubercle, from which the name is derived, is a morbid product, deposited from diseased blood in various parts of the body, and in proportion as that fluid is impure, and length of time it remains so, will tubercular diathesis continue.

FALL RIVER, MASS., March 20th, 1879.

JAMES I. FELLOWS, Esq.

Dear Sir: About three years ago I was attacked with bronchitis and tubercular disease of the left lung, and suffered for two years so severely that I was unable to attend to business. About a year ago I was advised to try Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites, and before I had finished one bottle my appetite and strength were greatly improved, my cough became less troublesome, my sleep was sound and refreshing, which had not been the case for over a year. I had suffered from nervousness and difficult breathing all the time I was sick, but your syrup has cured it all. I advise all persons afflicted as I was to use Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites.

(Signed) JAMES H. STEWART.

An endless chain of good effects is formed by FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES, and we are safe in saying, from a long experience in medicine, its virtues are not possessed by any other combination.

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

The population of Houlton, is 3,228.

The measles are quite prevalent in Houlton, with adults and children.

Mrs. Chas Nickerson, of Hodgdon, has an Oleander with 207 buds and 11 blossoms.

The population of Aroostook, by the late census is 41,700, a gain of 12,091, since the last decade.

The eightieth birthday of Mrs. J. A. Spaulding, widow of the late Rev. R. C. Spaulding, was observed last Tuesday, at her residence in Houlton, by a surprise party, consisting of six ladies of about her own age who met there, and a very pleasant afternoon and tea was enjoyed by all the aged participants.

The wheelwright shop of Benj. Packard, on the Belding road in Washburn, was entirely consumed by fire Friday evening, of last week. A family occupying the upper part of the building, lost nearly all their household effects. Loss about $225.00

A. M. Dudley, of Mapleton, the past season with 4 swarms of bees, doubled his swarms, and secured 350 lbs. surplus honey. E. Tarr, from 4 rather light swarms, increased to 8 with 420 lbs. surplus. G. L. Emerson, with 2 increased to 9, and got 224 lbs. surplus.

There is a man in Castle Hill, who has nearly perfected a machine, which he thinks will solve the problem of perpetual motion.

Cumberland.

The Portland Press says: Wednesday evening, by invitation of the Overseers of the Poor, the representatives of the morning papers visited the Alms House to see the improvements in this institution. Since the burning of the Stafford County Alms House in New Hampshire, it was deemed advisable to take all proper precautions here. A hydrant has been set within twenty feet of the house, 1200 feet of fire-hose, and ladders are placed in a building close at hand, on the inside of which is a fire alarm box. A watchman patrols constantly at night. In going through the Greely Hospital, a four inch pipe was shown running through the building up to the attic, with 650 feet of two-inch hose for each floor, and fire-buckets conveniently disposed. Small hose is also at hand to be applied to the faucets in the sink. In the Alms House proper the old hospital is now fitted up carefully and devoted to what is known as the worthy poor. Every part of the building however looks neat and it appeared evident that the unfortunates who depend upon the city for support are not neglected. In the main house, whenever chance offers, the same precautions against fire have been taken.

Franklin.

Sometime since, A. D. Morse died at the home of Daniel Lowe, in Carthage, and left by will, $5000 more or less to Mrs. Lowe, wife of Daniel Lowe. The brothers of the late Mr. Morse, from the town of Gray, are contesting the will before the Probate Court.

The house on the farm occupied by Mr. Townsend, formerly known as the David Gilman farm, at East Farmington, was burned recently. As the building stood at some distance from the road, in a neighborhood sparsely inhabited, no available effort could be made to put out the fire.

Notwithstanding the very cold weather, business is very lively in the vicinity of No. Chesterfield, giving employment to every laboring person desirous of being employed at remunerative wages. Messrs. Morrison & Sewell are having hauled to their mill a large lot of pine from their Winnegance lot, to be manufactured into boxes for East Wilton parties. Messrs. Wright & Keith are delivering about one hundred cords of hard wood to different parties in the village, taken from their lot purchased of John A. Hamilton.

Kennebec.

We learn from the Daily Herald, of Clinton, Iowa, that Mr. Charles F. Alden, son of Col. Darius Alden, of Augusta, was married on Wednesday of last week, to Miss Hattie L. Lamb, of Clinton. The bridal couple arrived at Augusta, Wednesday, on a visit to the groom's family. Mr. Alden is one of the prominent business men of Clinton, and his friends congratulate him on his new partnership.

Kennebec county lawyers had a "bar supper" at the Hotel North, Augusta, Friday evening.

The Universalist Society, Hallowell, have on exhibition the oil painting to be given to the Mayor of Augusta or Hallowell receiving the largest number of votes for it at their fair this week. It attracts a great deal of attention, and is a beautiful work of art.

Rev. W. S. Vail has been engaged to take charge of the Universalist churches in Gardiner and Hallowell, at a salary of $1200. He will reside in Gardiner, and will preach in Hallowell in the forenoon, and the rest of the day in Gardiner.

Knox.

During the gale of last week, the great wheel of Tillson's wind-mill on the shore by his wharf, at Rockland, was blown down and the wood work broken all to pieces. As there is a steam engine at work in the tower, the breaking of the wind mill wheel will cause no suspension in the supply of water from the well.

Piscataquis.

Mr. T. F. Dyer has resigned the position of leader in Dyer's Band, and is succeeded by Mr. James T. Roberts.

Mr. Fred Gould, of Milo, proposes to burn a kiln of brick this spring. It will contain about 150 or 200 thousand, and give employment to quite a number.

Waldo.

The new bark in G. W. Cottrell's yard at Belfast, recently sold to New York parties, is to be commanded by Capt. W. S. Gibson. Capt. Gibson is a native of Eastport, but now hails from New York. He is at present in Belfast looking after his vessel.

Some benevolent citizen of Belfast, last week drew up a subscription paper to obtain for Mrs. Chas. Brier, a wooden foot. Mrs. Brier, some time since, had her foot amputated at the Maine General Hospital. Mr. David Cressey, who has a wooden leg, and who understands the situation of a person deprived of so valuable a member as a foot, volunteered to circulate the petition. In a short time he succeeded in raising the required amount, $75.

The Belfast Journal says: Fire was put under the boiler of the Belfast Foundry company last week, the first time for a number of years. Mr. C. J. Hall has leased the building from the company, and will put the same in condition to work. Mr. George S. Chase, of this city is foreman of the foundry department, and John Loso is engineer. Two machinists will be set to work and the force increased as business may demand. The building is a good one, the facilities for work excellent, and it is to be hoped that a profitable business will again be built up.

The Belfast Journal says: Mrs. Abbott, of this city, mother of William T. Abbott, now serving a four years' sentence in the State Prison, at Thomaston, for incendiarism, is seeking to obtain his pardon. Mrs. Abbott does not receive the assistance of our leading citizens in the matter. Everybody remembers the terrorism which reigned in our city a few years ago, on account of the incendiary's torch, and contrasts that period with the present exemption from fires, and the security now felt by our people. Everybody sympathizes with the mother in her troubles, but the safety of property demand that a crime of such enormity should not be easily condoned.

A lively war of words between two women recently took place on board steamer May Queen while crossing the bay. A female passenger named Brown, from Islesboro, went up to another woman named Mrs. Rhoda Page, from the same town, and demanded the shawl she wore. Mrs. Page of course demurred, saying that the shawl was her own, she having purchased and paid for it. Miss Brown called her a liar and said the shawl belonged to her aunt, and that Mrs. Page had stolen it. She knew the garment by a certain mark which she recognized. Hot words ensued and at one time it looked as though Capt. Gilmore might have to bring his passengers into port under double irons. Subsequently Mr. O. M. Brown, the father of the girl, searched Mrs. Page's residence. Mrs. Page says she purchased the shawl at Castine, and has their receipted bill and a note from the firm confirming her statement. Mrs. Page came to Belfast last week, procured the necessary papers, and will sue Mr. and Miss Brown for defamation of character.

Washington.

The Eastport Sentinel says: Mr. Robbins informs us that Messrs. Moore & Wright, contractors for dredging the Channel at Lubec, write him under date of Jan. 31st, that they are building a new dredge boat for the Lubec work. She will be the strongest built dredge boat afloat, will have a vessel's bow and stern, instead of the usual square ends, and will be fitted with extra engines and winches so as to move the boat quickly in case of need. Four screw scows have also been built for this work, which the contractors will complete in 1882, if Congress makes the appropriation as recommended by Gen. Thom. The dredge boat will be completed in March.

AN OPEN CHALLENGE.

Gov. Plaisted has not long delayed showing his hand, and it would seem impossible for him to have exhibited more contempt than he has, for the Republican magnanimity to which he owes his place. He has from the very outset shown that he regards his office solely in proportion to its availability for partisan purposes, and his first official act was an attempt to crowd out a wounded soldier who was capably performing the duties of Messenger to the Governor and Council, to make room on the pay-roll for his own son, in defiance of the wishes of the seven Executive Councillors. He has followed this up by notifying the Messenger chosen by the Council to leave, and his organs have broken out in a chorus of threats that unless he is permitted to have his own way in everything he will refuse to sign any warrants for the salaries of public officers and other expenses of the Government.

But he has not stopped there. The Augusta despatches show that he proposes to carry things with a high hand and to be as autocratic as if the Fusionists controlled the State Government. Without a shadow of reason for any change Plaisted has proceeded to nominate persons for appointment as Indian Agent, Fish Commissioners, Inspector of Prisons, State Librarian and Trustee of the Insane Asylum, to take the places of the present incumbents of those positions. For a Governor who was squeezed in as Plaisted was, with the Legislature, Executive Council and all the State departments Republican, this attempt at a wholesale decapitation of Republican officials is decidedly the most impudent on record.

In this action Plaisted has served notice that he intends to have his own way so far as he can get it by riding rough-shod over the otherwise Republican State Government, and he flings his defiance at Council and Legislature with a boldness unsuspected during his military career.

It remains to be seen how far the Republican Legislature and Council will submit to be pulled around by the nose by this demagogue, and we strongly suspect that he will discover before he gets through that he has mistaken his men.

For the Republicans who properly, legally and unquestionably control the State Government to submit to being bullied by such a man as Plaisted would earn the contempt even of all manly opponents; and we hope the individual who is just now assuming to carry the State in his pocket will be taught that it takes more than one man to run the State of Maine.

THE ELECTORAL COUNT RESOLUTION.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

There are times when a man can show good sense in backing down. It is a pity if either a man or a party can find no other or better opportunity, but it is better to be sensible even in backing down than to be sensible in nothing. The Democratic party has seemed unlikely to be sensible in anything, since the present session of Congress began. Hence its unqualified backdown, in regard to the counting of the electoral votes, will arouse sensations of mingled pleasure and surprise. It was the only sensible thing for the party to do. But for that reason it was the very thing that was least expected.

Whoever sees fit may waste time in maintaining that the only object of the Democrats was to assert their opposition on principle, and as a purely abstract matter, to the counting of votes by the Vice President. It is not of the slightest consequence whether the party objects to this course or not. The present Congress has no power to bind any that may come after it, in respect to the mode of obeying a constitutional requirement. If the members of the present Congress had no other purpose than to put on record their entirely valueless opinions on a question of constitutional law, they were supremely foolish to insist upon doing it in a suspicious and offensive way. A great deal of time that belongs to public business has been wasted. Grave public interests have been sacrificed or endangered. The profound distrust of the people for the Democratic party has been deepened and intensified. And in the end the Democrats in Congress are obliged to pass a resolution which they might have passed without resistance on the very first or any other day of the session.

Probably the world will never know what it was that the Democratic idiots would have done, if they had been strong enough. Some sensible men in that party, by voting with the Republicans or staying away, have helped to make it impossible for the brainless incompetents and reckless revolutionists to do any mischief, and we shall be told henceforth that they never meant to do any. Perhaps not; but in that case Speaker Randall and some of his associates in the leadership have disgraced themselves very cheaply. If they had no serious purpose, and yet were willing to violate every trust that a Speaker or a Representative ought to hold sacred, their conduct appears a little more discreditable than it would have been had they avowed a purpose of the worst sort. The net result, as to the party, is that it has once more rallied itself, almost to the last man, under the leadership of its worst and most dangerous members, only to get beaten in disgrace, and forced to back down with flimsy excuses.

In sober earnest, it is not strange that members of the Democratic party at Washington begin to talk seriously of abandoning the organization. It must be unspeakably painful, to any Democrat who has common sense or a decent self-respect, to be identified with a party which cannot even get whipped without making the defeat ten times worse by its own senseless and disgraceful behavior. Year after year, this party allows itself to be dragged up to its inevitable thrashing, knowing that its men of brains and character are sent to the rear, that its meanest and most disreputable elements will shape its tactics, choose its methods, and daub it all over with dishonor in the hopeless struggle. What is the use? No good cause can possibly be helped forward by such fighting as the Democratic party has been doing of late years. As for its sole visible object, the spoils of office, the party is further from that end than it has been at any other time since the war. Year after year, in Congress, the members of the party suffer themselves to be dragged into positions both indefensible and discreditable, by men of such small calibre that they would never be suffered to take the lead in any political or business organization under the sun, except the Democratic party. The better men of the party are trotted up to vote, get beaten and disgraced as usual, talk bitterly for a week about leaders who have no sense, and followers who spend their time in bar-rooms, and then fall into line again as before, whenever the most unreasonable ass in the party sees fit to thrust forward his favorite form of folly or demagogism.

The retreat, as represents the electoral count, is complete. Democratic members of the Senate and of the House have agreed in caucus upon a mode of counting the votes which cannot be distinguished from that which several Republicans have repeatedly proposed. It has the sanction of precedent in 1819, 1857 and 1869, and leaves wholly unsettled all questions as to the powers of either house or of both houses, in any case of dispute. If, as Democratic leaders profess, no dispute as to the result of the recent election was intended, the method sanctioned by custom in similar cases ought to have been adopted at the outset without delay or question. All that the Republicans have demanded is that no plan should be adopted under which it would be possible to defeat the will of the people.

NOW THEY WANT TO UNLOAD SWAN.

If Thomas B. Swan, the Representative from Minot, is the rascal he appears to be, it only goes to show that the Republicans made a happy selection when they picked him out as one of the men to be bribed last winter.—Commercial.

It shows that the testimony of such a rascal was not entitled to credence, and fully confirms the evidence of his dishonesty that was brought out before the Investigating Committee last winter.

But the most gratifying feature to the Fusionists must be the recollection of the manner in which they glorified this creature Swan, who was chosen out of all their number as most worthy to preside over the House of Representatives, and who only a few weeks ago received the solid Fusion vote for Speaker of the House!

The action of the Fusionists in sustaining and endorsing such a scoundrel was a worse swindle than any that he has perpetrated upon his victims.

BENNETT AND GREELEY.

[Cincinnati Gazette.]

The former was an Ann street man for six years, and what years of toil they were! He met Greeley almost daily, but there was no congeniality, and it is doubtful if they ever held a half hour's conversation. Bennett, however, saw the power of the laborious printer and editor, who was plodding with such determination, and he offered him a partnership in the Herald. The idea was impracticable, since each man was a leader, and you might as well have united Ben Franklin and Voltaire in a grand journalistic effort. Both Bennett and Greeley were ambitious, but one looked on the journal merely as the road to wealth and distinction, while the other viewed wealth merely as the means of making the journal. The perfect newspaper was Greeley's life-long ideal. Bennett cared nothing for the contents of his paper so long as it sold. Greeley, on the other hand, did not expect wide popularity, nor did he care for its loss so long as the paper was maintained in its noble destiny. He did not, as he said, "expect to please everyone, but he intended to make a paper in which everybody (of decent character) might find something of interest and nothing offensive to morals." For this reason he employed writers of classical attainments, in which he was utterly deficient. Bennett, on the other hand, though a fine Latin and Greek scholar, was indifferent to literary style. He wanted a corps of free lancers, to make forays on society, and required spice rather than elegance. Greeley essayed the discussion of social topics with a view of improving the race, while Bennett only laughed at the reformer and his ethics. To quote his words, "Greeley was a galvanized squash." This was the end of all controversy. When these remarkable men left Ann street, one went to the east and the other to the west. They were only separated a few hundred feet, and for nearly thirty years each labored in producing a great journal—but what a gulf between them!

Greeley and Bennett, when they were Ann street editors, were both of slender build. As they approached from different directions, they seldom met. Greeley generally entered Ann street from Broadway, while Bennett's route was from Nassau street corner. Greeley though stooping, looked people squarely in the face, while Bennett, who was four inches taller, stood bolt upright, but fixed his eyes downward as though to conceal his repulsive features. Greeley would have felt as awkward with the latter as he would with a sword. Bennett dressed neatly; Greeley was a sloven. Bennett wrote a legible hand (he was once a teacher), while Greeley's caligraphy was abominable. As an editor, Bennett's forte was to dictate, while Greeley's was to write. The Herald's best articles were done by the staff, while the Tribune's thunderbolts bore the stamp of its chief. Both of these men were abstemious, and although Bennett was often the apologist for vice, his habits were very correct. His influence, however, was always for sale. Each of these eccentric editors, though ill adapted for courtship, became married men. Few had less time for love matters or less grace to win a woman's love than Bennett, but he announced with pride his approaching wedding. The birth of le jeune editeur was announced with still greater pride; and what a career that young editor has endured! Both Greeley and Bennett were borne to Greenwood eight years ago.

THE SENATORIAL DAMON AND PYTHIAS.

[Washington Cor. N. Y. Times.]

With a few of the Republicans, Senator Thurman has always been on the most intimate personal terms. This has been particularly true as regards Senator Edmunds. Both gentlemen are members of the Judiciary Committee, and the Republican giant in constitutional law has always, but especially since Thurman's service on the Electoral Commission, had great respect for his legal ability. This respect, which was, of course, returned, has in late years ripened into a warm personal friendship, which develops itself in many odd ways. For instance, the two Senators almost invariably take in company that refreshment and little stimulant which they may find necessary during a long and tiresome session. On such occasions their movements are quite as eccentric as they are amusing, and to the initiated well understood.

When the opportunity offers or the spirit moves one or the other of them—it is sometimes one and then the other—will solemnly and slowly rise in his place and look slyly and significantly toward his "brother Senator." Then the latter will in a moment be seen also to rise in his place. Then they go out of the chamber, always from different doors, and always solemnly and slowly. In the same manner they go, by different stairways, down to their committee room. There they meet, enter together, and the door is closed upon the outside world. What they do upon the inside can only be surmised, but it is noticeable that when they have been so closeted for a few moments they invariably return to the Senate Chamber, looking very much refreshed and strengthened. Sometimes one returns before the other. At such times, if it happens that a vote be in progress, and Edmunds being absent, Thurman's name is called, that gentleman, with the utmost gravity, though a close observer may notice a sly twinkle in his eye, always replies:

"Upon this question, Mr. President, I am paired with my honored friend, the Senator from Vermont. If he were present he would vote no—I should vote yes."

Exactly in the same fashion, if the great Republican Senator be the first in the chamber and Mr. Thurman absent during roll call, the tall, straight form of the latter may be seen slowly rising, and there comes in deep tones from the close-cut and scarcely moving lips the words:

"Upon this question, Mr. President, I am paired with my honored friend, the Senator from Ohio. If he were present he would vote yes—I should vote no."

Then, slowly again, the Senator from Vermont takes his seat, and shortly after, when his "honored friend," the Senator from Ohio, is again in his place, and has used his now historical bandana handkerchief, they exchange glances and go back to work. At such times he is an unfortunate man who attempts to contradict either of them in regard to a question of constitutional law. Allen G. Thurman, his rugged red face, portly form, clear-cut speeches, sound law, and grim humor, will be greatly missed in the United States Senate. Most of all, however, will he be missed by his friend, the Senator from Vermont.

A TEMPERANCE TEXT.

FURNISHED BY A MISSISSIPPI CONGRESSMAN.

[Wash. Cor. Phil. Times.]

The right to get drunk is an inalienable right guaranteed by the constitution to every American citizen, and not forfeited because of being elected to Congress. When a member gets intoxicated and interferes with the dispatch of public business it is another thing. This was the condition and attitude of Mr. Hooker, of Mississippi, during the debate on the Indian bill. He felt well enough at 1 o'clock to manage the bill himself. At 2 he was flowery and persistent. At 3 he occupied the floor most all the time between drinks, surpassing himself in rhetoric and confounding the House. At 4 he was maudlin. He offered amendments, made speeches, made points of order, withdrew amendments, made speeches, called for divisions, and was wholly beyond expostulation and ridicule. He moved down to the foot of the main aisle, and divided the time between stepping on Mr. Chittenden's toes and giving elaborate instructions to the chair. In vain the chair gently evaded him. In vain his humiliated friends went to him, one after another, and persuaded him to withdraw.

Hooker was unconscious of the disgusting spectacle he was making. He insisted on being heard on every point, and was wholly unmanageable. For a while members were amused. Then they gathered around him, like heedless boys about a drunken man in the streets, and laughed. Such a sight in the streets is sickening to most people. On the floor of Congress, as in this instance, it was doubly disgusting. This was soon evident on the faces of members and in a scarcely suppressed hiss from the galleries. The hilarity soon gave way to a painful silence, and various ruses were adopted to choke Hooker off. It was not until the Committee rose, as it did while the member from Mississippi was in a maudlin speech, that he was finally squelched. Then he staggered back to his place, and from thence entertaining his audience with occasional whoops and attempts to assist the reading clerk in calling the roll. The stern frown of Speaker Randall had no effect upon him. It was more humiliating and disgraceful because the subject of all this is one of the most courteous and accomplished gentlemen on the floor. Even while making this painful exhibition of himself, his language was chaste, his manner graceful and his bearing ludicrously courteous.

A VICIOUS FASHION. One of the most senseless and vicious fashions now popular is "the French heel," located along toward the centre of the foot. It is neither beautiful nor useful, and positively injurious to health. It is the unanimous expression of the wisest medical men that it has caused serious and complicated diseases. The weight of the body presses directly upon nerves that are but little protected, and the whole system suffers. A lady a short time since called upon an eminent oculist of this city for a nervous trouble afflicting her eyes. After a careful examination the physician told the lady it was caused by her French heels, and he would make no attempt at cure until she changed the character of her shoes. He informed the lady that she would stand a good chance for total blindness unless she obeyed. She left, remarking she "would think about it." Perhaps few would be so unwise, and yet fashion holds people with a good deal of power. It is but just, also, to say that very few who indulge in the use of shoes made after this foolish fashion are aware of the danger incurred.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Montgomery Blair says in a recent letter to a Missouri friend: "Lee told my father in the room in which I write this note, when my father at Lincoln's request offered him the command of our Army, that he was utterly opposed to secession—regarded it as anarchy—and said if he owned every slave in the country he would freely surrender them rather than see the Union dissolved, and yet took up arms for the cause he himself had pronounced illegal and ruinous because his relatives and friends were involved in it."

The old Family Physician at Fault—Dr. David Kennedy the Successful Surgeon.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth. His disease invaded the whole of his thigh-bone, and the sodden man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored the power once more to enjoy his life. Any suffering from any disease traceable to such a cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a Bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

The amendment permits either House to dispense by standing orders with the attendance of one or more of the said officers on either of the days respectively assigned for their attendance. The bill was accompanied by an elaborate report and will be called up at an early day.

Calendar of unobjected bills came up as order of business. A motion for its postponement and to take up the Grant Retirement bill was rejected as was a motion to take up the Franking Privilege resolution. Mr. Morgan's resolution denying the right of the Vice President to make the Electoral count was then taken up.

After discussion, the Edmunds amendment was rejected. Mr. Hoar moved an amendment adding to the resolutions the words "and that it is the duty of the Congress without delay to institute measures to execute a due and orderly performance of said duty in the future." FOREIGN NEWS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. The World's London correspondent telegraphs: "In an interview with Parnell the latter says the government made a gross mistake in arresting Davitt, whose acts were done with no attempt at concealment and in the regular and legal progress of the agitation. This arbitrary exercise of power will excite the people and perhaps precipitate unfortunate events. He considered the government had imprisoned one of the strongest supporters of order in Ireland, and removed one of the strongest barriers against agrarian crime."

LONDON, Feb. 3. Mr. Shaw, of Cork, said last night, that he regretted the arrest of Davitt. He had done nothing and he was afraid he never would come out of prison alive.

J. O'Kelly (Home Ruler) said the expulsion of the Irish members was a logical sequence of the speaker's action putting them to silence. For neither act is there any precedent in law. Both were pure acts of illegality and in direct violation of long established constitutional privileges.

A Dublin despatch says that many of the tenants of Lord Lurgan and Gosford, in county Armah, have paid their rents. Several have also paid rents to Earl Mayo in county Kildare. The rent paying movement is extending and it is believed will enlist the sympathy of the English and Scotch members of Parliament in favor of the coming land bill.

DUBLIN, Feb. 3. The authorities have just issued instructions to the constabulary to adopt unusual precautionary measures in view of the disturbed state of the country. Upward of forty fresh mounts have been provided for the horse police. It is intended to materially increase the strength of this branch of the force. An arrangement will shortly be carried out by which bodies of police will be stationed at distances of from 10 to 12 miles apart.

LONDON, Feb. 4. The specific charge upon which Davitt was arrested is a breach of the conditions of his ticket of leave in connection with his association with the Land League. He has yet to serve between four and five years of his sentence. Davitt was removed, it is supposed, to Pentonville Prison. The police have been instructed to give no information on the subject.

Davitt's ticket-of-leave was cancelled in consequence of his inflammatory language which the authorities believed might lead to a breach of the law. It is not expected that he will be detained after order is restored in Ireland.

LONDON, Feb. 4. The steamer Kron Prince Frederick Wilhelm, has been in collision with another steamer off Cuxhaven. The latter steamer sank in three minutes. Six lives were lost.

LONDON, Feb. 4. The Home Rule members thus far to-day have been remarkably quiet. They held a conference and another manifesto will go forth to-night.

BERLIN, Feb. 4. France has renewed her proposal for an international conference on the silver question.

"FATINITZA." A large audience assembled at Norombega Hall last evening to witness the performance of the opera "Fatinitza" and many of those present expressed great dissatisfaction with the performance. There has evidently been a lack of rehearsals, as with but few exceptions the members of the company were unfamiliar with their lines, as well as the business of the piece, and under such circumstances it was, of course, impossible to do the opera anything like justice.

No town in existence is more ready to recognize true merit than the town of Orrington.

THE BUCKSPORT & BANGOR RAILROAD COMPANY have recently put on their road a newly arranged snow-plow which works admirably. The flanger is attached to the plow and by means of a new arrangement the man who tends it can ride on the engine when the flow is on front of the train, or in the car when the plow is at the rear. Heretofore a man has ridden on the plow a position attended with considerable danger, as it was only a few days since that an employe on the St. Croix Railroad was seriously if not fatally injured while doing this work. The Bucksport line has been well managed during the past week, which has proved so unfavorable for railroading, and the trains have been about on time every day.

DEAF AND DUMB ASYLUM. There was a very large attendance in Representative Hall at Augusta, Wednesday evening, in spite of the bitter weather, to witness the exhibition and lecture by the Principal of the American Asylum for Deaf and Dumb, Hartford, Conn., to show the method of teaching and the proficiency of the pupils. Four of the scholars accompany the Professor in the exhibition. They were bright looking boys and girls, and were very intelligent. Questions were asked them, and readily answered in the sign language. At the close of the evening "Sheridan's Ride" was finely rendered by means of signs by one of the boys, and "Nearer My God to Thee," by one of the girls.

A MARINE NEWSPAPER. Capt. E. P. Nickels, captain of the late bark Clara, of Searsport, and editor of the Ocean Chronicle, made the Journal office a visit on Thursday last. The captain saved a portion of his type and printing material from the wreck, and printed a half sheet on the homeward passage on board the English steamer Dunrobin Castle. It appears from the latest number of the Chronicle that the editor is not exempt from the fate that befalls many of his contemporaries on shore, inasmuch as he was arrested on the last voyage and the bark detained off Boston light. This is undoubtedly the first case on record in which a printing office was brought to anchor for an alleged offence on the part of its proprietor. A U. S. shipping commissioner brought the complaint, but the vessel was detained only ten hours. The captain consoles himself by saying the wind was easterly and he could not get to sea. Captain Nickels has one advantage over his brother editors ashore for he can spread his topsails and under a spanking breeze remove his printing office at the rate of twelve knots an hour, out of the reach of the officers of the law, or take them to sea with him should they board the vessel. Captain Nickels will procure another vessel and continue the publication of his paper.—Belfast Journal.

AUTOMATIC BELL BUOY. Yesterday afternoon we saw at the Hinckley & Egery Iron Works a new self-acting automatic bell buoy, invented by Mr. W. J. Close, who is already well known to the public as the inventor of "Close's Fog Bell." This machine is composed of two vessels, or boats, made of boiler iron, water tight and hinged together. The forward boat is 12 feet long by 7 feet beam and about 3½ feet depth. The after one is of the same beam and depth, but is only 8 feet in length. On the forward boat is a frame which supports a large bell, and on the after boat is a similar frame from which like arms, extend two long iron bars notched with teeth, or cog-work their entire length. These arms are so arranged on the forward boat, as to connect with wheels, also cogged, and which wheels, when in motion, move a heavy iron lever which acts as the tongue of the bell. Now, when the motion of the sea moves the two boats, the motion of each is naturally different, one going up, and the other going down, and the cog-work is inevitably moved, and the bell rung. These boats are provided with keels, to which a cable and anchor, (one for each boat) is attached, and the boats are held at any anchorage desired, no rock-filling being required to make them fast, as in the case with most buoys. The bell strikes very loud and it would be a valuable machine in many places. The trial boat will probably be anchored off Owl's Head, Penobscot Bay.

VALENTINES FOR EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-ONE. Valentines commonly range in prices from three cents to $10 and may be had to order at much higher prices. The demand for valentines ranging from five cents to fifty cents each, is amazing. Dealers are selling hundreds, where they sold dozens a year ago. Great improvements have been made in the artistic qualities of the valentines. Some are really magnificent, and the most beautiful are by no means always the most expensive. Fringed valentines are among the latest novelties. They are bright and pretty chromos of lithographs, crowded with cupids, hearts, flowers and other symbolic imprints. They are bordered with gayly-colored silk and satin fringes, which add richness to the picture, and make them well worthy of use in parlor ornamentation. One of the prettiest is in the form of a tiny fan, fringed with silk, and bearing upon it a picture of a summer sunrise on a beautiful lake. Mechanical valentines are numerous, and many of them are very ingenious contrivances. An entirely unpretentious little token, which might be passed over at first glance, upon being opened, discloses the figure of a lovely young girl standing erect before a golden spinning wheel amid surroundings that remind one of tales of fairyland. The demand for so-called "comic valentines" is on the wane. Occasionally a really funny one is to be found, but, for the most part, they are unhappy in design, inartistic in execution and coarse and insulting in sentiment.

ADDITIONAL RESCRIPT

Concerning the E. & N. A. Railway.

The following additional rescript has been received from the Law Court:

Rescript by Symonds, J.—Under the mortgage to the plaintiffs, purporting to convey to them as trustees, all the right, title and interest of the European and North American Railway Company in and to "all and singular its property, real and personal, of whatever nature and description, now possessed or to be hereafter acquired; including its railway, equipments, and appurtenances; all its rights, privileges, franchises and easements; all buildings used in connection with said railway or the business thereof, and all lands and grounds on which the same may stand or connected therewith; also, all locomotives, tenders, cars, rolling-stock, machinery, tools, implements, fuel, materials, and all other equipments for the constructing, maintaining, operating, repairing and replacing the said railway or the appurtenances, or any part thereof."

Held, that the lien of the mortgage was not lost upon rolling-stock withdrawn, under circumstances stated in the opinion, from present use, upon the then broad gauge and changed to meet a contemplated narrowing of the gauge, notwithstanding the stock upon the road was kept up or improved at the same time that the materials for the narrow guage use were withdrawn; that repairs and improvements made upon such rolling-stock by the consolidated European and North American Railway Company which had acquired the right to control the road subsequently to the plaintiffs' mortgage, were in the nature of accessions to a mortgaged chattel, and subject first to the mortgage that had priority of date; that there can be no loss of identity of the original companies in the consolidation to the prejudice of the rights of prior creditors or to the destruction of prior liens, and that such increased values do not belong to the consolidation company as a distinct entity.

Held, further, that the plaintiffs being in possession of other rolling stock to which their own mortgage does not apply, purchased by the New Brunswick Company, or the consolidated company, and mortgaged by them to other trustees; the plaintiffs, having the right to use and consume it in the performance of the duties the corporation owed to the public, and being liable to the mortgagees for their interest, under the facts stated, may recover its full value of the attaching creditors of the mortgager, or the attaching officer; holding any part to which their own mortgage does not apply, in trust, or subject to their liability to those from whom they received possession as they held the property before the attachments were made.

Judgment for plaintiffs. Damages to be assessed at nisi prius.

THE FLEEING SWAN.

The Enemy to Bondholders,

THE FOE TO "GILDED PAUPERS,"

THE "POOR MAN'S FRIEND,"

The Champion of Toiling Millions,

DROPS HIS MASK,

Swindles the Farmers,

CHEATS THE POOR FACTORY GIRLS,

And Now Seeks to Cheat Justice.

How It Was All Done.

We take the following detailed account of Thomas B. Swan's swindling operations from the Kennebec Journal:

The admirers of Thomas B. Swan, the Fusion Representative of the town of Minot in the present Legislature, the same who last year figured in the House as the individual who declared that an attempt had been made to shake his virtue, also his allegiance to the Greenback party, by the offer of a thousand dollar bribe, will be stricken with very peculiar emotions when they learn that he has been detected by a government officer in extensive swindling operations, and has fled the State to escape arrest by the officers of the law who were upon his tract. Swan, it will be recollected, plumed himself upon being the champion of the poor man, and the foe of "bloated bondholders," and "gilded paupers," but it appears from recent revelations that he has been engaged in a systematic scheme of robbery, the victims of which were principally farmers and factory girls.

THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND.

Several weeks ago the attention of Post Office Inspector Bigelow, of this city, was called to certain swindling operations being carried on through the mail. Mr. Bigelow accordingly began to investigate the matter, and he was so successful that the whole scheme of rascality was traced out and up to the guilty party, who would have been arrested last Monday had he not learned of the movements against him and left the State by stealth and in a hurry. The rascal was T. B. Swan, of Mechanic Falls, and the methods of his operations were as follows:

SWAN'S SWINDLES.

Swan began in November last sending out through the mails circulars purporting to be issued by the "Eastern Manufacturing Co.," also circulars in like manner appearing to be sent out by the "Mechanic Falls Jewelry Co." Both these companies are bogus. The names were simply invented and adopted by Swan as means to aid him in getting at the pockets of certain classes of people in the community and to cover up his deviltry. The following is a copy of his "Eastern Manufacturing Co." circulars:

Eastern Manufacturing Company.

THE EXCELSIOR CORN SHELLER!	THE AMERICAN Emery Mowing Machine KNIFE SHARPENER.
Simple, Effective, and easily operated.	Sharpens all Edge Tools.
Price only - $4.50.	Price, - - - $5.00.

MECHANIC FALLS, ME., Dec. 31, 1880.

DEAR SIR:

You have been recommended as a suitable person to introduce our "Excelsior Corn Sheller," and "American Mowing Machine Knife Sharpener," to the Farmers in your vicinity. Retail price of Sheller, $4.50; Sharpener, $5.00.

If you will show the Sheller and Sharpener to your friends and neighbors, we will send you a Sheller and Sharpener, and GIVE them to you FREE. We should expect you to sell to your neighbors, if they wished to buy, at the retail price, and will supply you with what you might sell for $2.00 for Sheller and $2.50 for Knife Sharpener. We do not ask you to spend your time showing the articles, unless you so choose, only when not busy with your own business. We make this offer to introduce these articles into each town in the U. S. at once.

We put the Sheller and Sharpener against your time; if you do not sell, all you get is a Sheller and Sharpener for your time, and we lose both; if you make some sales, you make $3.50 on each, and get a Sheller and Sharpener for yourself, and we make a sale of our goods.

If you accept the offer, send us one dollar to pay for packing and charges of transportation, which we estimate will cover cost; if not we will pay balance ourselves, and we will send you a Sheller and Sharpener free of all expense.

We allow you ten days to take advantage of this offer; if you do not desire to accept, please notify us so we can engage some one to take your place, and recommend us to some good, reliable man of your town who would deal justly with us if we should send him goods on credit.

Very Respectfully,

EASTERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Now let us look beneath the surface of this fair and plausible circular. Of course none but farmers would want "corn shellers", and "mowing machine knife sharpeners," so the farmers were the class to be preyed upon by Swan, the farmer's friend. The retail price of the corn sheller was only $4.50; cheap enough, any farmer would say, for a corn sheller. The retail price of the mowing machine knife sharpener was $5.00. But to the man who made the sales, the agent, Swan would sell these articles at $2.00 and $2.50 each, respectively, leaving the agent a profit of $2.50 on each one that he sold. Very considerate, apparently, was Mr. Swan of the hard working agent!

But before the agent could avail himself of this seemingly large inducement to go into business for Swan, it was necessary for him to send one dollar to Swan, to "pay for packing, and charges of transportation" of a sample of the corn sheller and mowing machine knife sharpener, for no keen-witted farmer would buy such articles, until the agent had exhibited a specimen of them.

THE NATURE OF THE SWINDLE.

And just here is where Swan's swindle came in. The would-be agent inclosed one dollar in a letter to the "Eastern Manufacturing Co." at Mechanic Falls, and as the result he received in return a piece of common sheet iron three inches long by one and one-half inches wide, representing "The Excelsior Corn Sheller;" and a piece of pine wood, eight inches long in the shape of a three-cornered file, this having been dipped about half its length in shellac and scantily covered with a very thin coating of emery, to represent "The American Emery Mowing Machine Knife Sharpener!" The cost of transporting both these articles by mail was just two cents!! And the entire expense of manufacturing them could not have exceeded two cents more!!! Thus for every four cents that Swan expended in his operations he fleeced the pocket of the unsuspecting agent of one dollar, giving the latter, for his honest money, articles that were entirely useless, and which he would not dare exhibit, lest he became the laughing stock of the community in which he resided. Time was when farmers turned their barn shovels into cornshellers, but a cornsheller consisting of a piece of sheet iron three inches by one and one-half inches in size, is something that no farmer ever heard of until Swan's invention, which he describes in the circular as "simple, effective and easily operated."

SWAN CHEATS THE FACTORY GIRLS.

Beside the circulars of the "Eastern Manufacturing Co.," Swan sent out circulars purporting to be issued by the "Mechanic Falls Jewelry Co." These circulars were in substance as follows: "That the company had just established a factory for the manufacture of heavy plated jewelry, and were desirous of introducing their goods into every town in the United States. They proposed to send to any young lady who had been favorably recommended, a heavy gold plated chain and brooch pin, free, provided such young lady would wear these articles and recommend them to her companions and associates. The young lady, however, was to send 50 cents to the company, to pay cost of transportation for either the chain or brooch, if only one was ordered; one dollar if both were ordered. These circulars were sent chiefly to factory towns, to cheat the factory girls of their hard earned wages. So far as can be learned no jewelry has been sent out in return for letters enclosing money in answer to these circulars. Not even a two cent chain has been received by the factory girl who invested her 50 cents or one dollar in the bogus jewelry concern of T. B. Swan, the champion of the poor against the rich.

TWO MORE BOGUS COMPANIES.

There were still two other companies which arose at Swan's magic incantations. One was called the "Poland Manufacturing Co." A circular issued in its name promised to give town clerks in various towns throughout New England 50 cents for every 25 names of farmers, and the same sum for every 25 names of young ladies, who would like to act as agents for the "Eastern Manufacturing Co." and the "Mechanic Falls Jewelry Co." The other company was called the "Ricker Rake Co." of Mechanic Falls. This also promised in its circular 30 cts. to town clerks for every 20 names of good farmers. These companies were merely auxiliaries to the "Eastern Manufacturing Co," and "Mechanic Falls Jewelry Co., intended to supply them with names to address their circulars to. The town clerks who took the trouble to send in names are still waiting for the pay offered them by the circular. Not one of them has received a cent.

A WHOLESALE RASCAL.

Of the "Eastern Manufacturing Co." circulars, Swan has sent out, as nearly as can be estimated, from 10,000 to 12,000. In answer to these he has received about 500 ordinary letters probably containing one dollar each, 44 registered letters, and half as many money orders for one dollar each. These circulars have all been mailed by T. B. Swan in person or by parties working for him in his office. The letters containing money that have been received in answer to circulars have all been delivered to Swan, and the registered letters and money orders have all been receipted for by him in the name of the "Eastern Manufacturing Co." or "Mechanic Falls Jewelry Co."

When Swan came to Augusta to take his seat in the Legislature, he enjoined the Postmaster at Mechanic Falls not to deliver his letters to any person but himself, and none have been delivered to any other person.

SWAN THINKS HE HAS A GOOD THING.

At the start the circulars were to be sent out ostensibly in the interest of the pump business with which Swan is connected. No circulars have been mailed at Mechanic Falls, but at other offices. The first lot sent out was 250, for which he received $50. He said to a person at Mechanic Falls, after his returns came in, that if he could send out from 10,000 to 15,000 circulars, and get returns in proportion to what he received for the first lot sent out, he had "got a d—d good thing."

CLEARING THE LAW.

To another person who had obtained some knowledge of his operations and asked him what he proposed to send out for a Corn Sheller and Mowing Machine Knife Sharpener, he replied that if he got a good return out of his scheme, say from one to two thousand dollars, he should "give 'em a bang up good thing, but if he got only a few hundred dollars he should turn 'em off with some cheap thing, just enough to clear the law."

Up almost to the present date he has had two men employed in his office sending out circulars. By the promptness and excellent management of Mr. Bigelow, the scheme has been nipped in the bud. Had it been permitted to run a short time longer Swan would have feathered his nest well, and his victims would have been counted by thousands.

It is one of the greatest swindles ever attempted in the State, and its author has distinguished himself by his loud mouthed denunciation of other men as thieves and villains who by economy have gained property, and boasted of his own great modesty and super-abounding sympathy for poor farmers and laborers.

Swan was talked of last summer as the fusion candidate for Governor; also as candidate for the fusion nomination for Congress in the second district, and at the organization of the legislature received every fusion vote in the House as candidate for Speaker. Swan's seat in the legislature has been vacant since last Saturday. His greenback friends are in a pitiable condition on account of the rascality of their great political leader.

Mr. J. N. Donham, representing the firm of Hoyt, Fogg & Donham, the Portland publishers, is in the city gathering material for the "Maine Year Book," for 1881. This important work will be particularly valuable this year inasmuch as it will contain the new State valuation and census.

HOME FOR AGED WOMEN.

The Recent Improvements.

During the past season some marked improvements have been made at the "Home for Aged Women," and as our citizens are all interested in this institution, a reporter of the WHIG called at the Home, yesterday morning, for the purpose of making a note of the same. The Home is beautifully situated, as it stands in one of the most sightly spots in the city, and being surrounded by large grounds, an unobstructed view is obtained on all sides.

For some time the Board of Managers have realized that the house was not large enough to answer the purpose for which it was intended, but were unable to devise any way by which the needed improvements could be obtained, until last season, when a plan of operation was decided upon and a Building Committee chosen under whose direction the work was rapidly pushed forward. The building that was originally intended as a barn has been entirely remodeled and is now ready for occupancy. A new stone foundation has been placed under it, the old doors removed and new and neatly finished ones put in their place, and five additional sleeping rooms obtained in the second story. There is also one large room on the first floor that is now only used for storage purposes, but it can easily be made habitable when wanted.

When the house was first built a small porch connected the ell and barn, but this has been changed so that it is now three stories high, which gave them an opportunity for four new sleeping rooms, making ten additional rooms in all, as there is one new room on the first floor. Some changes have also been made in the working apartments in the ell, which make them much more convenient. One of the improvements is a new wash-room containing four stationary tubs and a large boiler. Heretofore the tubs have been in the kitchen and this change is one that will be fully appreciated by all housekeepers.

One of the most important changes of all, however, is the steam-heating apparatus, the comforts of which have been thoroughly realized during the past cold "spell." The pipes have been carried all over the house and radiators placed in every room, so that an even temperature is maintained all the time. Besides the radiators, open fireplaces have been placed in two of the new apartments which are intended for sick rooms. The rooms in both the old and new parts are bright and cheerful, those in the rear affording a beautiful view of the Penobscot as it winds its way towards the ocean, while the side and front rooms look out upon the street. In fact everything about the institution is bright and home-like—a place where the inmates can pass their declining years surrounded by those quiet comforts so dear to the aged. There are now thirteen inmates at the Home, and the changes mentioned above will afford accommodations for eight more. The matron, Miss S. E. Patten, is a lady admirably adapted for the position and enjoys the love and respect of the inmates, as well as the confidence and esteem of the Managers.

This institution is one in which our citizens take a just pride, and is a credit to the Queen City of the East. The maintenance of such institutions, however, requires money, and it is for the purpose of adding a little to their fund that the Board of Managers announce a novel entertainment at City Hall, next week. We sincerely hope that their efforts in this and every other undertaking for so worthy an object, will receive the hearty co-operation of our citizens, and that this entertainment will prove as much of a success financially as it undoubtedly will in every other particular.

HESPERIDES.

BY WILLIAM WINTER.

On roseate shores, in evening's glow,
With pulsing music soft and sweet,
While winds of summer gently blow,
The waves of Time's great ocean beat;
No cloud obscures the heavenly dome,
And only on the shining sea
The tossing crests of silver foam
Presage the tempest yet to be.

Low down upon the ocean's verge,
Blent with the waters and the skies,
Far, far across the sounding surge,
The Golden City's towers arise;
Fair in the sunlight they gleam,
Youth's chosen realm, bold Manhood's goal,
The promised land of Fancy's dream,
The Golden City of the soul!

How softly bright, how purely cold,
Those domes and pinnacles of bliss!
How radiant, through its gates of gold,
That world of rapture smiles on this!
How glorious, in the dying day,
O'er bastion ridge and glimmering moat,
Through rainbow clouds and rosy spray,
Its purple banners flash and float!

There, safe from every mortal ill,
Waits every wasted love of man:
The hopes that Time could ne'er fulfil,
And only Death and Nature can!
There peace shall touch the eyes of grief,
And mercy soothe the heart of pain;
And every bud, and flower, and leaf
That withered here shall bloom again!

Ah, sailor to the golden realm,
With hope's glad haven just before,
Why muse beside the idle helm,
With listless glances back to shore?
Night hovers o'er his trackless way
To blot the stars and dim the land:
What voice is at his heart, to stay
The signal wafture of his hand?

Not thus, in other days, his soul
Of power and trust could wander back—
But saw the mists of Time unroll,
And angels throng his shining track;
Heard mystic voices, from afar,
Of warders on the sacred coast;
Sprang up to meet the morning star
And mingle with the heavenly host.

But he has borne the rage of storms,
Through many a slow and patient year,
Still following those celestial forms
That beckon and elude him here;
Till doubt has dimmed his eager gaze,
And toil subdued his ardent mind,
And sorrow burdened all his days
With quest of peace he shall not find.

Her kiss is cold upon his lips,
Who swore to live forever true;
His eyes have seen youth's phantom ships
Fade down beyond the distant blue;
His hand has cleared the gathering moss
From many a tablet, cold and white;
Where, dark with sense of doom and loss,
His comrades sleep, in starless night.

The wayward shafts of cruel Fate
That strike the best and purest lives;
The curse of blessings come too late;
The broken faith that life survives;
Love's frail pretence, Ambition's lure,
Malignant Envy's poisoned dart
That wounds and tortures, past all cure,
The mangled, seared, embittered heart;—

The weary, wistful, sad repose,
Of ardor quenched and feeling sped;
The arid calm he only knows
Whose hope is,—like his idols,—dead;
All that repentant spirits bear,
For sin and folly past recall;
Remorse, endurance, patience, care—
His soul has known and borne them all.

Ah, touch him gently, winds of night,
And ocean odors, vague and strange,
Revive his morn of young delight—
Supreme o'er doubt, and fear, and change:
The fading tints of life restore,
The wasting fires of youth relume—
And round his radiant path once more
Let music sound and roses bloom.

Long has he gazed in Nature's eyes,
Long kept the faith her glory yields—
The pageants of the starry skies,
The flowery pomp of spangled fields,
The fragrant depth of woodland ways,
White in the moon, or dusk and dim,
And lonely mountain tops that blaze
Through sunset lustre, vast and grim.

Long has he bowed at Nature's shrine—
Shall Nature's soul desert him now?
Ah, shine again, thou star divine,
And touch with light his darkening brow!
Though pleasures pall, though idols fall,
Though wisdom end in long regret,
Death's glorious conquest pays for all,
And He who made, will not forget!

The day is done, the storm is free,
And night and danger ride the gale;
But, bravely speeding, far at sea,
Shines, white and clear, one lessening sail;
One moment seen, now lost to sight,
Mid driving cloud and ocean's roar;
Yet steered by God's own beacon light,
He yet shall reach the golden shore.

HOW DOT HEARD "THE MESSIAH."

BY HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH.

The church was vast and dim. The air was fragrant with pine boughs, and over the golden cross of the chancel hung heavy wreaths of box and fir. A solitary light shone in front of the organ.

Little feet were heard on the stairs leading to the orchestra. A door in the organ case opened quietly and was about to close, when a voice was heard:

"Is that you, Dot?"

"Yes, sir."

"What makes you come so early? It is nearly an hour before the rehearsal begins. I should think the little bellows room would be a rather lonely place to wait an hour."

"I always come early," said the boy, timidly.

"So I have noticed. Why?"

"Mother thinks it best."

"Come out here, and let me talk with you. I have sung in the choir nearly a year, and have hardly had a glimpse of you yet. Don't be bashful! Why, all the music would stop if it were not for you, Dot. Our grandest Christmas anthem would break into confusion if you were to cease to blow. Come here. I have just arrived in the city, and have come to the church to wait for the hour of rehearsal. I want company. Come, Dot."

The little side door of the organ moved: a shadow crept along in the dim light towards the genial-hearted Tenor.

"Do you like music, Dot?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is that what makes you come so long before the rest?"

"No, sir."

"What is it, then?"

"I have a reason—mother would not like to have me speak of it."

"Do you sing?"

"Yes, at home."

"What do you sing?"

"The parts I hear you sing."

"Tenor, then?"

"Yes."

"Will you sing for me?"

"Now?"

"Yes.

"I will sing, 'Hark, what mean?'"

"Rossini—an adaptation from Cujus Animam."

The boy did not understand.

"Well," said the Tenor, "I beat time—now, Dot." A flute-like voice floated out into the empty edifice, silvery, pure, rising and falling through all the melodious measures of that almost seraphic melody. The Tenor leaped to his feet, and stood like one entranced. The voice fell in wavy cadences: "Heavenly Hallelujahs rise." Then it rose clear as a skylark, with the soul of inspiration in it:

"Hear them tell that sacred story,
Hear them chant—"

The Tenor with a nervous motion turned on the gas-light.

The boy seemed affrighted, and shrank away towards the little door that led to the bellows room.

"Boy!"

"Sir?"

"There is a fortune in that voice of yours."

"Thank you, sir."

"What makes you hide behind that bench?"

"You won't tell, sir?"

"No: I will befriend any boy with a voice like that."

The boy approached the singer and stood beside him.

He said not a word, but only looked toward his feet.

The Tenor's eyes followed the boy's.

He saw it all, but he only said tenderly: "Dot."

A chancel door opened. An acolyte came in, bearing a long gas-lighter; he touched the chandeliers and they burst into flame. The cross glimmered upon the wall under the Christmas wreaths; the alabaster font revealed its beautiful decorations of calla lilies and smilax; the organ glowed with its tall pipes, and carvings and cherubs.

The first flash of light in the chancel found Dot hidden in his little room with the door fast closed behind him.

What a strange place it was! A dim light fell through the open carvings of the organ case. Great wooden pipes towered aloft with black mouths—like dragons. Far, far above in the arch was a cherub, without a body—a golden face with purple wings. Dot had looked at it for hours, and wondered.

He sat looking at it to-night with a sorrowful face. There were other footsteps in the church, sounds of light happy voices.

Presently the bell tinkled. The organist was on his bench. Dot grasped the great wooden handle; it moved up and down, up and down, and then the tall wooden pipes with the dragon mouths began to thunder around him. Then the chorus burst into a glorious strain, which Dot the year before had heard the organist say was the "Midnight Mass of the Middle Ages:"

"Adeste fideles
Laeti triumphantes,
Venite
Venite
In Bethlehem."

The great pipes close at hand ceased to thunder. The music seemed to run far away into the distance, low, sweet and shadowy. There were sympathetic solos and tremulous chords. Then the tempest seemed to come back again, and the luminous arch over the organ sent back into the empty church the jubilant chorus:

"Venite adoremus,
Venite adoremus,
Venite adoremus,
Dominum."

After the anthem there were solos. The Tenor sang one of them, and Dot tried to listen to it as he moved the handle up and down. How sweet it sounded to Dot's ears! It came from a friendly heart—except his mother's it was the only voice that had ever spoken a word of sympathy or praise to the poor bellows boy.

The singers rested, laughed and talked. Dot listened as usual in his narrow room.

"I came to the church directly from the train," said the Tenor, "and amused myself for a time with Dot. A wonderful voice that boy has."

"Dot?" said the precentor.

"Yes: the boy that blows the organ."

"Oh, yes, I had forgotten. I seldom see him," said the precentor. "Now I think of it, the sexton told me some weeks ago that I must get a new organ boy another year: he says this one—Dot you call him—comes to the church through back alleys, and goes to the bellows room as soon as the church is open and hides there until service time, and that his clothes are not decent to be seen in a church on Sunday. Next Sunday begins the year—I must see to the matter."

"He does his work well?" asked the Alto with a touch of sympathy in her voice.

"Yes."

"Would it not be better to get him some new clothes, than to dismiss him?" she asked.

"No. Charity is charity, and business is business. Everything must be first class here. We cannot have ragamuffins creeping into the church to do church work. Of course, I should be glad to have the boy supplied with clothes. That is another thing. But we must have a different person in the bellows box. The sexton's son is bright, dresses well, and I have no doubt would be glad of the place.—Now we will sing the anthem, 'Good-will to men.'"

The choir and chorus arose. The organist tinkled the bell, and bent down on the pedals and keys. There was a ripple of music, a succession of short sounds, and—silence.

The organist touched the knob at the side of the key-board, and again the bell tinkled. His white hands ran over the keys, but there issued no sound.

He moved nervously from the bench, and opened the little door.

"Dot?"

No answer.

"The boy is sick or faint."

The Tenor stepped into the room and brought out a limp figure.

"Are you sick, Dot?"

"Yes, sir; what will become of mother?"

"He heard what you said about dismissing him," said the Alto to the precentor.

"Yes, but the sexton was right. Look at his shoes—why, his toes are sticking through them."

"And this bitter weather," said the Alto, feelingly.

"Can you blow, Dot?"

"No, sir; it is all dark, sir. I can't see, sir. I can't but just stand up, sir. You won't dismiss me, sir, mother is lame and poor, sir—paralyzed, sir: that's what they call it—can't use but one hand, sir."

"This ends the rehearsal," said the precentor in an impatient way. "Dot, you needn't come to-morrow, nor till I send for you. Here's a dollar, Dot—charity—Christmas present."

One by one the singers went out, the precentor bidding the sexton have a care that Dot was sent home.

The Alto and the Tenor lingered. Dot was recovering.

"I shall not hear the music to-morrow. I do love it so!"

"You poor child, you shall have your Christmas music to-morrow, and the best the city affords. Do you know where Music Hall is, Dot?"

"Yes, lady."

"There is to be an oratorio there to-morrow evening—The Messiah. It is the grandest ever composed, and no singing in America is equal to it. There is one chorus called the 'Hallelujah Chorus'—it is wonderful: the man who composed it thought he heard the angels singing and saw the Lord of Heaven, when he was at work upon it; and he is to be the first tenor singer, and I am to sing the altos—wouldn't you like to go, Dot?"

"Yes, lady. Is the man who composed it to be the tenor singer—the one who heard the angels singing, and thought he saw the Lord?"

"No, Dot: he is to be the tenor singer," "I, Dot," said the Tenor.

"I have a ticket for the upper gallery, which I will give him," said the Alto. "A friend of mine bought it, but I gave her a seat on the floor, and kept this for—well, for Dot."

The Tenor talked low with the lady.

"Here is a Christmas present, Dot." He handed Dot a bill.

"And here is one for your mother," said the Alto, giving Dot a little roll of money.

Dot was better now. He looked bewildered at his new fortune.

"Thank you, lady. Thank you, sir. Are you able?" The Alto laughed.

"Yes, Dot. I am to receive a hundred dollars for singing to-morrow evening. I shall try to think of you, Dot, when I am rendering one of the passages—perhaps it will give me inspiration. I shall see you, Dot—under the statue of Apollo."

The sexton was turning off the lights in the chancel. He called Dot. The church grew dimmer and dimmer, and the great organ faded away in the darkness. In the vanishing lights the Alto and Tenor went out of the church, leaving Dot with the sexton.

It was Sabbath evening—Christmas. Lights glimmered thickly among the snowy trees on the Common; beautiful coaches were rolling through the crowded streets.

Dot entered Music Hall timidly through a long passage through which bright, happy faces were passing, silks rustling, aged people moving sedately and slowly, and into which the crowds on the street seemed surging like a tide. Faces were too eager with expectation to notice him or his feet. At last he passed a sharp angle in the long passage, and the great organ under a thousand gas-jets burst upon his view. An usher at one of the many lower doors looked at his ticket doubtfully:

"Second gallery—back."

Dot followed the trailing silks up the broad flights of stairs, reached the top, and asked another usher to show him his seat. The young man whom Dot addressed had that innate refinement of feeling that marks a true Boston gentleman. He gave Dot a smile, as much as to say, "I am glad you can enjoy all this happiness with the rest," and said:

"Follow me."

His manner was so kind that Dot thought he would like to speak to him again. He remembered what the Alto had said about the statue of Apollo, and as the usher gave him back his check and pointed to the number on the check and the seat, Dot said:

"Will you please tell me, sir, which is the statue of Apollo?"

The usher glanced at the busts and statues along the wall. He spoke kindly:

"That is the Apollo Belvedere."

Dot thought that a pretty name; it did not convey to his mind any association of the Vatican palace, but he knew that some beautiful mystery was connected with it.

And now Dot gazes in amazement on the scene before him. In the blaze of light the great organ rises resplendently, sixty feet in height, its imposing façade hiding from view its six thousand pipes. People are hurrying into the hall, flitting to and fro; young ladies in black silks and velvets and satins; old men—where were so many men with white hair ever seen before? stately men with thin faces, bald—teachers, college professors. Tiers of seats in the form of half a pyramid rise at either end of the organ. These are filling with the chorus—sopranos and altos in black dresses and white shawls, tenors and basses in black coats, white neck-ties and kids. In front, between the great chorus, rises a dark statue, and around this, musicians are gathering—players on violins, violas, violoncellos, contra basses, flutes, oboes, bassoons, trumpets, trombones, horns; the pyramidal seats fill; the hall overflows; the doors are full, the galleries. The instruments tune. A dark-haired man steps upon the conductor's stand, he raises his baton; there is a hush, then half a hundred instruments pour forth the symphony.

Dot listens. He has never heard such music before; he did not know that anything like it was ever heard on earth. It grows sweeter and sweeter.

"Comfort ye."

Did an angel speak? The instruments are sweeter now:

"Comfort ye my people."

Did that voice come from the air?

Dot listens and wonders if this is earth:

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people saith your God, saith your God."

Dot sees a tall man standing alone—in front of the musicians—is it he that is singing? Dot gazes upon his face with wide eyes. It is he—and he is the Tenor who had befriended him the night before.

What music followed when the chorus arose and sang:

"Every valley shall be exalted!"

Dot hears the grand music sweep on, and he feels, as all feel, that the glorious Messiah is about to appear. He sees a lady in white satin and flashing jewels step forward; he hears a ripple of applause, and a voice full of strength and feeling sings:

"O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, O thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!"

Dot knows that voice. Will indeed she lift her eyes to him?

No, she does not. She sits down, the hall ringing with applause. She rises, bows, but she does not look towards the statue of Apollo, near which Dot is sitting.

Dot hears dreamy music now, more enchanting than any before it. The great audience do not stir, or move a fan, or raise a glass. It grows more ethereal; it seem now but a wavy motion in the air. He hears a lady near whisper:

"The Pastoral symphony."

The Alto has risen again. She stands out from the great chorus—what a beautiful figure! The dark-haired man lifts his baton: the lady turns her face toward the upper gallery. Her eyes wander for a moment; they rest on—Dot.

She sings: "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd, and he shall gather the lambs with his arm," etc.

There was no applause now. Tears stood in the Alto's eyes—tears stood in the eyes of every one. There was a deep hush and tears, and in the silence the Alto stood looking steadily at—Dot.

There was a rustle in the hall—it grew. The silence was followed by a commotion that seemed to rock the hall. The applause gathered force like a tempest.

Then the beautiful lady looked towards Dot, and sang again the same wonderful air, and all the hall grew still, and people's eyes were wet again.

The Hallelujah Chorus with its grand fugues was sung, the people rising and standing with bowed heads during the majestic outpouring of praise.

It is ended now—faded and gone. The great organ stands silent in the dark hall; the coaches have rolled away, the clocks are striking midnight.

"I have come to congratulate you before retiring," said our Tenor to the Alto, as he stepped into the parlor of the Revere House. "To-night has been the triumph of your life. Nothing so moved the audience as 'He shall feed his flock like a shepherd.'"

"Do you know to what I owed the feeling that so inspired me in that air?"

"No."

"It was poor little Dot in the gallery. You teach music, do you not?"

"Yes."

"You are about to open a school?"

"Yes."

"Give Dot a place as office boy—errand boy—something. It will lift a weight from my heart."

"I had thought of it. He has a beautiful voice."

"I might get him a place in a choir."

Fifteen years have passed. The old Handel and Haydn Society have sung The Messiah fifty, perhaps sixty times. The snows of December are again on the hills. The grand oratorio is again rehearsing for the Sabbath evening before Christmas.

A new tenor is to sing on the occasion—he was born in Boston has studied in Milan, and has achieved great triumphs as an interpreter of sacred music in London and Berlin.

The old hall is filled again. The symphony has begun its dulcet enchantment; the Tenor, with a face luminous and spiritual, arises, and with his first notes thrills the audience and holds it as by a spell:

"Comfort ye."

He thought of the time when he first heard those words. He thought of the hearts whose kindness had made him a singer. Where were they? Their voices had vanished from the choirs of earth, but in spirit those sweet singers seemed hovering around him.

"Comfort ye my people."

He looked, too, towards the Apollo on the wall. He recalled the limp bellows boy who had sat there sixteen years ago. How those words then comforted him! How he loved to sing them now!

"Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned."

It was Dot.—Wide Awake.
